ON THE COVER

"A wisp of cloud . . . a sturdy willow, perhaps, or a mellow mountain . . . for you are all of these to us." With these opening words, Lenoir Rhyne students this spring dedicated their 1964 Hacawa to "an amazing composite of gentleness and energy, docility and strength", Dr. H. R. Greenholt. The dedication came at an appropriate time for Dr. Greenholt. The popular head of Lenoir Rhyne's history department was celebrating his 25th anniversary of teaching at the Lutheran institution. (See story on Page 11.)

AUTHOR of this article is Prof. Russell E. (Bud) Brown, associate professor of economics at Lenoir Rhyne. The text is based on a speech he delivered at a recent meeting of the Greensboro Area Lenoir Rhyne Alumni Chapter. Brown has served on the Lenoir Rhyne faculty since 1947. He holds A.B. and M.A. degrees from Bucknell and has completed Ph.D. residence requirements at the University of Chicago.

The end of each school year is simultaneously a time of reckoning and rejoicing. It is a time not only for the examination of students, but also for introspection on the part of those of us responsible for their education. Remembering that teaching is an art not a science, we must search each moment for a clue to the better understanding of our mission. Even the weary sighs of nostalgia can evoke some meaningful stimuli toward the rededication of that sense of idealism that contemporary education demands.

Perhaps, at this time we might share some memories and at the same time search for some of those qualities of mind and spirit that can and should be nourished.

In the cause of some 25 years in the college classroom, I have discovered many different kinds of students and teachers. Of course, any classification is dependent upon the end to be served. In this context, however, I offer not research, merely some personal reflections and my own subjective observations in what we might term a search for an ideal.

Perhaps we shall see some of ourself in these typical students, as seen from the front of the classroom.

He Beats The System

First, there is the type I call the "Big Spender." He or she will pay any price, money, pride, honor or integrity to beat the system. This individual will steal, cheat, plagiarize, or spend two weeks devising a code and two days transcribing it on his fingernails to pass an exam on material that might have been learned in two hours.

Not infrequently this student relies upon a carefully cultivated display of charm. They come like the Greeks bearing gifts, sitting in the front row, gleaming testimony of their 21% fewer cavities. They laugh appreciatively at each feeble attempt at humor, then yawn at the climax of an important point.

As alumni, this type remains true to form. They return to the campus, warmly clasp your hand and fondly remark, "You know what I really remember about your

The Big Spender . . . The Spiritualist . . . The Playboy . . . The Bookworm - All fall short. But in each we can see some of ourselves and perhaps learn how to understand better our mission.

Search For An Ideal

classes. Those gay, striped ties you always wear."

He Goes Through Motions

Then there is the student I call the "Spiritualist" — he's medium. He goes through all the motions uninspired, uninspirable. He comes to class every day, sits in the back row listening blandly. He checks his watch carefully and two minutes before the end of the class closes his notebook, takes out a cigarette and like Pavlov's dog, salivates at the first peal of the bell. Before the last echo has died, he is two hundred yards away with a coke and a comic book.

Then there is the "Playboy" and his "Playmate." Learning for this student is an avocation sandwiched between dates, dances and other extra-curricular activities. Such a student may be reasonably bright, but the cashmere sweater pulled over the head at the age of sixteen has formed a protective covering for the mind. He is sensitive only to his own hedonistic delights. His place in society is assured by his father's material success. He will ultimately graduate, find his niche in society, join the right clubs including the Book-of-the-Month which he will rarely read and subscribe to Time and Life which, alas, he will read. He will probably never realize he is not educated. Thus he will serve as a model for the next generation supporting the same mediocrity, the same superficiality and, incidentally, his Alma Mater.

Too Busy To Evaluate

Finally, there is the "Bookworm." He plunges energetically into the intellectual vineyard gathering facts willy-nilly. He is a veritable garbage can of information. He is too busy to assimilate, analyze, or evaluate. He acquires knowledge without understanding. Like a sponge, he soaks up information. At examination time he wrings out his brain which, like the sponge, then returns to its original state — not a molecule has been changed.

Before we search for the ideal we might take Shakespeare's advice and look at ourselves. I must confess that teachers too, may fall into several categories, some good, some bad, too many indifferent.

There is for example, "The Tyrant." He is best described by a three-letter Freudian term, "ego," particularly his own. He is very wise, has done his homework, accumulated a vast store of knowledge and in the process created a considerable impression — on himself. He is determined that others see him as he sees himself. He demands rigid attention as he generously shares the pearls of his wisdom. He altruistically permits the rays of his brilliance to fall upon the intellectual peasants — who sit at his feet — recipients of his charity. He communicates, but he doesn't educate. His ego is served and his students remain adoringly sterile.

'Planter' Scatters Facts

Then there is the "Planter." He scatters facts, figures, dates, statistics like seeds to the four winds. His examinations are the harvest, but the baskets are often empty for he has failed to prepare the ground. And we are all familiar with the results of seeds that fall upon barren ground.

We might also consider the "Fundamentalist." He has an uncritical faith in the power of knowledge. He waves the wands, and dances the ritualistic dances to scare the evil spirits of ignorance out of their hiding places. He can be the most self-righteous of all. He is often the complete pedagogue. Form is all, the means become ends. He might well observe the "Twist" — a dance in which the end is not obscure.

Finally, there is the saddest and perhaps most prevalent of all. He is the teacher who has surrendered to indifference — carried along by the momentum of the majority. He engages in no last causes, tilts at no windmills, goes out on no limbs. Committed to the moment, protected by tenure, he asks little and gives less. In his dedication to mediocrity he offends no one, is liked by all, loved by none. The most reactionary would find him harmless and visa versa.

Positive Exploration Needed

Implicit in this negative exercise are some clues to the ideal at least as I conceive of it. But such values should be explored positively. Perhaps we can draw upon the lessons of history.

In 1859 Napoleon III prepared once again to make war on Austria. In the midst of those preparations it was brought to his attention that Jomini, Bonaparte's old Marshall, was still alive. Jomini had participated in planning the successful campaign against the Austrians in 1809. So he was called upon once again, and the French marched confidently into battle with plans structured upon principles 50 years old. They won — for as one historian has put it, "No one can beat the Austrians at turning the clock back." They responded with a defense devised in 1759. Thus a fifty-year-old offense triumphed over a hundred-year-old defense.

The moral should be clear. Those who would make a good education better and a better education best must understand with that iconoclast of the nightclubs, Mort Sahl, that "The future lies ahead."

Victims of 'Conventional Wisdom'

But even such tautologies are not always recognized. All of us are more or less victims of what John K. Galbraith calls the "conventional wisdom." We respect the familiar and honor the comfortable; however, the march of events has rendered our ideas obsolete. We deride the striving for economic security while building an impenetrable wall, cemented with dogmatism to resist the attacks of knowledge with its inherent insecurity.

Such a process is, of course, futile. As the caustic Thorstein Veblen put it, instincts become habits which solidify into institutions. But in the end, time with its allies, knowledge and technology, erode the foundations and they too crumble.

Certainly a people that long ago rid itself of notions about witches — of myths that horse hairs dropped into water turn into snakes — can adapt to changing economic and social conditions. Certainly there are axioms remaining to be challenged.

The late President Kennedy was fond of an anonymous bit of verse to illustrate the point of these remarks:

"There was a little dog so long,
He hadn't any notion
How long it took to notify
His tail of his emotion.
So even when his ears were pulled,
And his eyes were filled with sadness.
His little tail went wagging on
Because of previous gladness."

Time Has Collapsed

We live in a world of change. A world where time has collapsed as knowledge explodes. Where tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow jets faster than sound. This is not the world of Adam Smith, nor Benjamin Franklin nor Isaac Newton nor Uncle Tom. It is the world of John Glenn, of Martin Luther King and of you and me.

We are reminded of our commitment to equality by the Negro. We are reminded of our mortality by science. This is our world with all of the danger, with all of the promise, it implies.

What kind of students and teachers does such a world demand?

In my view we need students who are curious, sensitive, aware, imaginative, and involved. Students who seek, who despair yet who seek again, whose goal is excellence. Students whose minds are open but disciplined. His horizon is infinity, not the suburb; his time is eternity, not payday. He is committed not to the bread and circuses of Dostoyevsky's Grand Inquisitor but to the freedom of mind and spirit that dignifies his humanity.

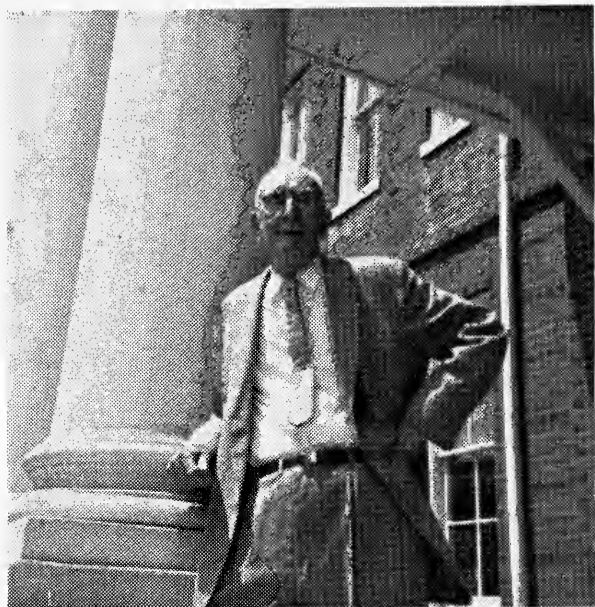

What of his teachers?

The Courage To Dare

They should be of the same stuff. Beyond this they should have the courage to dare and to inspire daring. They should realize that resistance can be invigorating, that the best art is often created in the most difficult media. As one observer has pointed out, though marble is more difficult than wax, it endures.

Today's teacher must persist, he cannot stop or surrender. There is no such thing as a scholar who has learned, only scholars who are learning.

Finally he should be aware that to profess is to commit an act of faith. But that faith is bulwarked by his heritage. He should be both humble and proud that he walks in the path of Socrates, of Plato, of Christ. He might heed the words of C. P. Snow that "in this age of the greatest crime may well be innocence." Or recall with St. John that "the truth shall make you free."

FORMER Lenoir Rhyne Professor Busch pauses on the porch of Yoder building, one of the two buildings which date back to the "Lenoir" college era when he taught at the school.

Lenoir Rhyne—Minus 50 Years

"So much green grass!"

That was the repeated comment of Dr. Karl G. A. Busch, former Lenoir Rhyne professor who revisited the campus this summer for the first time in 28 years.

His memories of the college date back to 1906 when he first came to "Lenoir" college to assume teaching duties. But none of his visual images of the 50-acre campus included "a single blade of grass".

The tall, erect scientist paused in front of Highland hall and pointed to the 18-inch strip of sand between the porch and street curbing. "That's the way I remember the Lenoir Rhyne campus — bare and sandy", he exclaimed.

Unfortunately for the retired professor, the ground underneath Lenoir Rhyne's grass and trees and buildings was about the only thing he could survey to revive cherished memories. His visit was a search for remnants of a vanishing campus.

The buildings that stood on the campus when he came to Hickory in 1906 have disappeared. Old Main, Oakview hall, the academy building — even the houses in which he lived near the campus — were gone. Construction on the old St. Andrew's Lutheran church building was begun before Dr. Busch left in 1908, but even that building had been torn down just months before his recent visit.

One building he did recall. The Yoder building, completed in 1913 as a science classroom building, he helped to furnish. This was done when he returned to the college following a five-year absence to teach during the 1913-14 year.

"Where is the fireplace?", he asked as he entered the building.

The guide paused with a blank expression. "Didn't know it ever had a fireplace."

"Sure, it did."

On the second level, he examined the plaster closely.

"You can tell the plaster has been patched here. I'll bet this is where the old fireplace was", he said, then added: "But the building has changed."

Renovation of the interior five years ago made it unrecognizable. There were new floors, new ceilings, new lighting fixtures, even new wall partitions.

Also missing were the chemistry laboratory tables he had built as one of his duties as Professor of Science. (The building is no longer used for science instruction.)

"I had the help of a carpenter for a week or two, but the two of us did all the work," he recalled. "We had a very difficult time finding copper nails to build the experiment tables. And we never were able to find the proper protective material to put on the biology tables."

Dr. Busch, now 81, is retired and lives in Columbus, Ohio. He taught college classes for 51 years, most of them at Capital university, where he holds the title Professor Emeritus of Sciences.

At Lenoir Rhyne, he also taught in other fields. Three different foreign languages and a mathematics course were included in his first-year teaching schedule along with his two science classes.

The city of Hickory has changed as much as the college during the past half-century, the visitor observed. His recollection of the business section was a cluster of stores facing the railroad. The extent to which business houses had spread into adjacent streets surprised him.

For some time, he searched the streets of the city for a trace of St. Paul's seminary, which he often visited as a Lenoir college professor. He finally concluded that it, too, had vanished.

"I often thought, even after leaving Hickory, I would like to return for my retirement years. But, in view of all the changes, I guess it's just as well that those plans did not work out," he concluded.

On his trip to North Carolina, Dr. Busch was able to see some of the people he knew at Lenoir college.

A visit with Prof. W. H. Little, a fellow professor who still lives near the campus, brought him up to date on some of the other members of the early faculty: Dr. R. L. Fritz, Sr. (president), W. J. Stirewalt (Latin and Greek), Miss Lillie Belle Hallman (music), Dr. E. E. Randolph (chemistry and geology), K. R. Hartman (preparatory department), Miss Ella Belle Shirey (house mother) and Miss Marie Rebecca Sawyer (expression).

He also saw one former student, Carolyn Rhodes (Mrs. W. H. Little), and talked with the widow of another, J. L. Kiser.

Before leaving the state, he continued to Durham to visit with another colleague, Prof. K. B. Patterson, who taught English and mathematics at Lenoir college.

Together, the two men formed one of the first student orchestras on the Hickory campus.

Dr. Busch was also coach of one of the first baseball teams at the college.

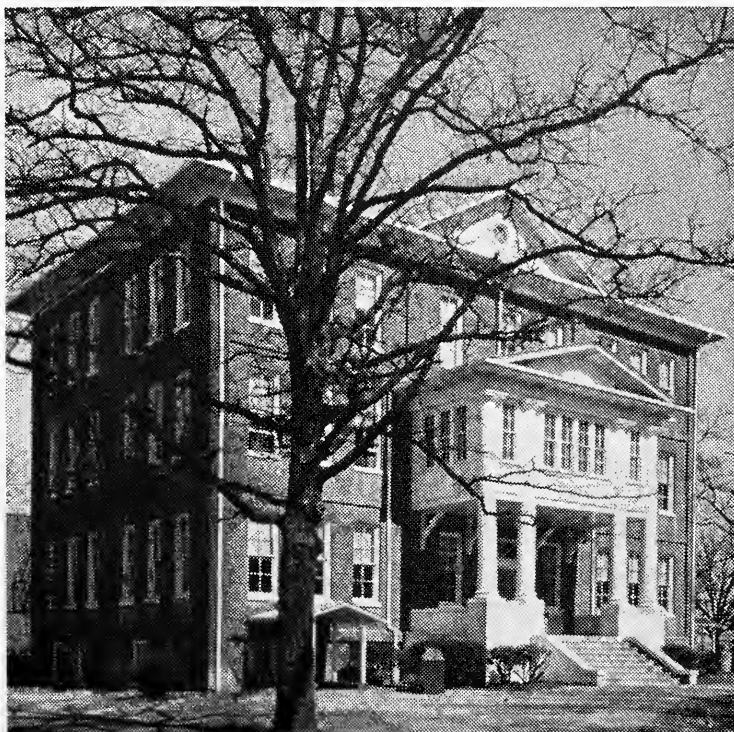

"We didn't win often, but we had fun," he recalled. "I still remember one of our first baseball trips. It was to Asheville by train, and most of the boys had never been on a train before.

"After getting them all settled in a hotel, I instructed all of them to get a good night's rest and I went to bed. Pearl Rhyne was the only one who followed my instructions; the others were out half the night.

"The next day, Saturday, we had games with two different teams — one in the morning and one in the afternoon. Of course, we lost both."

Of course, they weren't accustomed to playing in a field of green grass, either.

Y O D E R "Science" building, which Dr. Busch helped to equip, was vacated by the science departments in the fall of 1959 when the college's new science building was opened. The interior of the old building was completely renovated and now provides classroom and office space for the business, sociology, philosophy and Bible departments.

On The Campus

Physicist Named Distinguished Alumnus

Dr. Karl Z. Morgan, director of the health physics division of the Oak Ridge National laboratory in Oak Ridge, Tenn., was presented the Distinguished Alumni Award by the Lenoir Rhyne Alumni Association during the association's annual dinner at the college on May 30.

The award was presented in honor of "his outstanding service in the field of health physics and in recognition of his living reflection of the principles of education and Christian character upon which Lenoir Rhyne is established."

The physicist, who attended Lenoir Rhyne with the Class of 1929, was particularly singled out for his membership on the 13-member International Commission on Radiological Protection. The commission, which recently met in London, set international standards to insure adequate protection from ionizing radiation.

He is also one of the six charter members and former president of the Health Physics society which now has 2,500 members in 43 countries. He is a former director of the American Industrial Hygiene association and a former Southeastern section director of the American Physical society.

Dr. Morgan also is a member of the American Nuclear society, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Standards association, the Society of Nuclear Medicine, and is a fellow in the American College of Radiology.

The alumni association also presented three Distinguished Service awards in recognition of outstanding service to Lenoir Rhyne during the past year.

Receiving the awards were a Charlotte lawyer, Lewis B. Carpenter, and two Hickory businessmen, Albert M. Allran and Donald W. Bumgarner.

Allran and Bumgarner were cited for their fund-raising efforts which aided the college in starting the enlargement and renovation of the football stadium this year. The construction work began in February and is scheduled for completion by September.

Carpenter was presented the award for his services as former president and retiring member of the board of directors of the alumni association and his assistance in other phases of the college program.

The awards were presented by Alumni Association President Klynt Ripple of Lexington before Lenoir Rhyne alumni and visitors at the alumni dinner in the Voigt R. Cromer College Center. Speaker for the event was Dave Morrah, a free-lance writer and illustrator of Greensboro. The dinner was the closing feature of the Alumni Day program observed on the campus May 30.

Twenty-three alumni classes held reunions during the day and were represented at the evening event. Classes receiving special recognition at the dinner included the Class of 1944 (largest number present) and the Class of 1914 (highest percentage present).

Prof. W. H. Little of Hickory was the earliest graduate in attendance, representing the Class of 1896. Mrs. Madge Allran Young of the Class of 1942 also was recognized for having traveled from Tampa, Fla., to attend the program.

Sigmon Heads Alumni

Jesse C. Sigmon, Jr., of Newton has been elected president of the Lenoir Rhyne Alumni Association for the 1964-65 year.

His election was announced to the association's board of directors during their annual meeting on the Lenoir Rhyne campus on May 30.

The Newton lawyer, a Lenoir Rhyne graduate with the Class of 1943, was elected to the office in a mail ballot conducted among Lenoir Rhyne's 10,000 alumni in April and May.

Results of the balloting were announced by the Rev. Paul L. Morgan of Greensboro, a member of the board of directors and chairman of the nominating committee.

Sigmon assumed office on July 1 succeeding Klynt Ripple of Lexington, who completed his second term as president.

Other officers elected were Dr. Paul E. Lutz, professor of biology at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, first vice-president; Allan LaTorre, athletic director at St. Stephen's high school in Hickory, second vice-president; and Miss Betty Scott Lentz, parish secretary at St. John's Lutheran church in Salisbury, secretary-treasurer.

Miss Lentz was re-elected to office for the third consecutive term. Dr. Lutz succeeds Don Safrit, a Raleigh insurance representative, and LaTorre replaces Marcus C. Smith, a Lenoir school principal.

The alumni balloting also renamed David C. Wright, a Greensboro TV reporter, to a two-year term on the 12-member board of directors.

Five new members of the board were elected: Mrs. Mary Ann Barringer Johnson, Salisbury YMCA director; Luther C. Boliek, Greenville, S. C., savings and loan officer; the Rev. Brady Y. Faggart, Jr., of Salisbury, secretary of Christian education of the North Carolina Synod of the Lutheran Church in America; Dr. B. W. Goodman, Hickory physician; and the Rev. George A. Keck, pastor of St. Stephen's Lutheran church at Lenoir.

Members of the board who retire this year following two-year terms are Marshall C. Abee of Winston-Salem, Lewis B. Carpenter and Harry E. Faggart, Jr., of Charlotte, Frank Little of Maiden, and Mrs. Kenneth B. Lee of Hickory.

Students Pick Greenholt

Dr. H. R. Greenholt, who last month completed his 25th year as history professor at Lenoir Rhyne, was selected by Lenoir Rhyne students for the dedication of their 1964 yearbook.

GREENHOLT

His selection was announced during the college's final convocation of the year by the Hacawa co-editors, Miss Judy Lyerly of East Spencer and Miss Margaret Whitticar of Salisbury.

The professor and current head of Lenoir Rhyne's history department was described by the Hacawa staff as "an amazing composite of gentleness and energy, facility and strength" and a "source of respect for a multitude of minds."

The citation praised Dr. Greenholt for "inspiring us to know the answers simply because we know that anything less than right would be an injustice to ourselves."

Dr. Greenholt, who joined the Lenoir Rhyne faculty in 1939, is a graduate of Gettysburg college and Gettysburg Lutheran Theological seminary. He also holds the Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago. Prior to coming to Hickory, he taught history for six years at Gettysburg college.

The Hacawa staff also announced the selection of Doug Stowe of Mt. Holly and Miss Judy Davis of Kannapolis as best all-around boy and girl in the Lenoir Rhyne senior class.

The yearbook recognitions were a part of the annual awards day program presented during the closing weekly Monday convocation in the P. E. Monroe auditorium.

Scholastic awards announced during the program included the following: Gerald Briggs of Lexington, winner of the Cecil Willard Science medal and the Chi Beta Phi science award; Robert C. Hoyle of Cherryville, freshman achievement award in chemistry; Miss Jane Arndt of Newton, freshman achievement award in mathematics; Miss Judy Patterson of China Grove, Fritz mathematics medal; Miss Janet Peace of High Point, freshman award in physics; and Steve Moose of Salisbury and Larry Yoder of Lincolnton, winners of the Lutheran Brotherhood Life Insurance scholarships for the 1964-65 year.

Bob Shelby of Belmont was named winner of the E. J. Sox Playmaker award, and Gary Ellison of McLean, Va., was presented the Actor's award.

In the area of forensics, Don Safrit of Salisbury received the debate award, and the following were named winners in college public speaking contests: Miss Virginia Lewis of Stanley, women's oratory; Robert Maxwell of Dallas, freshman-sophomore men's declamation contest; and Talmadge Edwards, Jr., of Franklinton, junior-senior men's oratorical contest.

The annual Hickory Business and Professional Woman's Club awards to outstanding Lenoir Rhyne student teachers were given to Miss Lyerly, the Hacawa co-editor, and Miss Sandra McRee of Maiden.

The English award, presented to the senior English major with the highest average in English, was awarded to Wayne Preslar of Hickory, and the new Lenoir Rhyne Poetry award for the best original poem written during the school year went to Miss Kathleen Rhoads of Gilbertsville, Pa.

The Iota Epsilon Omega award for outstanding contributions to Lenoir Rhyne journalism was presented to Miss Lois Willard of Riverside, N. J., the 1962-63 editor of the student newspaper.

Miss Betty Pugh of Asheboro received the Kappa Delta award presented annually to the outstanding junior woman student.

The program also included recognition of eleven Lenoir Rhyne seniors who have received scholarships and assistantships from graduate schools for further study next year. Outstanding service to the college band by eleven students was also recognized.

Pre-Med Heads Class

Gerald Briggs of Lexington was named top student among the 189 graduates of Lenoir Rhyne during the institution's 73rd annual spring commencement on June 1.

Briggs, a pre-medical student, was named first honor student and was awarded the Scholarship Medal for the highest academic average among the graduates.

Wayne Preslar of Hickory was named second honor student. Briggs led the class with a 96.4 average, and Preslar followed with a 96.0 average.

Two other students were granted their degrees magna cum laude in recognition of academic averages above 94. They were Mrs. Carolyn Payne Elkin of Hickory and Mrs. Joyce Moser Wilson of Newton.

An additional 13 students earned averages above 92 but less than 95 and received their degrees cum laude.

They were Miss Alice Adcox of Winston-Salem, Miss Gloria Berry of Hickory, John Birkeli of Norway, Jimmy Coffey of Lenoir, Miss Carolyn Eleazer of Columbia, S. C., Miss Donna George of Cumberland, Md., Miss Paula Hastings of Lincolnton, Miss Anna Hyder of Charlotte, Mrs. Genevieve Warlick Mode of Casar, Mrs. Mary Rose Yoder Perry of Hickory, Terry Satterwhite of Asheville, Miss Mary Helen Stasavich of Greenville, and Miss Margaret Whittecar of Salisbury.

Honored By Augustana

Dr. A. L. Lugn, Lenoir Rhyne professor of earth sciences, was presented the outstanding achievement award by the Alumni Association of Augustana college in Rock Island, Ill., last month.

He was one of five Augustana alumni to receive awards during the college's 104th commencement activities. Dr. Lugn was cited for his "distinguished contribution to the field of geology".

During his many years as professor of geology at the University of Nebraska, he supervised and directed the research and theses preparation for 71 graduate students working toward the master of science and doctor of philosophy degrees. He retired from Nebraska in 1962 as professor emeritus and accepted a call to return to the faculty of Lenoir Rhyne.

The 68-year-old geologist and geochemist serves as Lenoir Rhyne's representative with the Piedmont University Center, and has been selected as one of the inter-institutional lecturers within this group of 16 cooperating colleges.

Dr. Lugn also is continuing his research on heavy minerals and volcanic ashes. Next April he will present a paper on heavy minerals at the annual meeting in New Orleans of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists.

Dr. Lugn has served as a consultant and researcher for many governmental agencies at the federal, state and municipal levels. He has participated in International Geological Congresses in Mexico and Scandinavian countries.

He is a fellow of the Geological Society of America, and is listed in Who's Who in America and American Men of Science. Dr. Lugn is the author of 60 books, scientific papers and articles.

Five Events Slated

Four lecturers and a dance group will be presented at Lenoir Rhyne college next year as features of the annual Lecture-Entertainment Series.

The series will open on Oct. 6 with the dance presentation by the American Choreographers' Company of New York City.

Jack Anderson, Drew Pearson's colleague on the "Washington Merry-Go-Round" syndicated column, will serve as lead-off lecturer when he appears on the campus to discuss "The Policy Makers". The lecture on American politics will be given on Nov. 16.

"India" will be the subject of the second lecture, to be presented by Rita Dar, a niece of Pandit Nehru and daughter of Madame Pandit. She will speak on Jan. 12, 1965.

A former ambassador from Cuba, Sergio Rojas, will discuss Latin America in the fourth program on Feb. 9.

The final presentation of the series will feature Irv Wermont, taking as his topic "Laughter: The Secret Weapon". His appearance is slated for Mar. 23.

The Lenoir Rhyne series is a part of the season program of the Hickory Community Concert association. The college events are also open to the public at a cost of $1 for adults and 50 cents for public school students.

Students Report Research

Reports on experiments conducted by two chemistry students in Lenoir Rhyne's undergraduate research program were presented to the North Carolina Academy of Science during the academy's annual meeting at Davidson college in May.

The experiments were begun in 1962-63 by Roy Johnston, who is now pursuing graduate studies at N. C. State college. The study was continued during the past year by David Fox, a senior chemistry student from Granite Falls.

Fox and Dr. David Y. P. Chou, head of the Lenoir Rhyne chemistry department who supervised the experiments, presented the research paper at the academy meeting. Dr. Chou also reported the results of parallel experiments which he conducted personally.

The experiments focused on the reversal compositions of mixed solvents in two acid-water systems. Dr. Chou's research dealt with the system of strontium chloride-acetic acid water; the students experimented with the system of calcium formate-formic acid-water.

Two Get Frosh Medal

Lenoir Rhyne made a joint presentation of its Freshman Medal to two Catawba county coeds during the 73rd annual graduation exercises on June 1.

Declared joint winners were Miss Jane Arndt of Newton and Miss Rebecca Cromer of Hickory. Their selection was announced by Dr. E. L. Setzler, registrar and academic dean of the college.

Miss Arndt, a mathematics major, is a graduate of Newton-Conover high school. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Allen Arndt, Newton-Conover highway.

Miss Cromer is the daughter of Lenoir Rhyne President and Mrs. Voigt R. Cromer. She is a graduate of Hickory high school and is pursuing a general liberal arts course of study.

Normally the medal is presented to one person, but a unanimous vote of the Lenoir Rhyne faculty called for the joint award this year. Both students completed their first year with "A's" on all credit courses.

The Freshman Medal distinction is awarded to the most outstanding representative of the freshman class. Selection is based on scholarship, participation in college activities, strength of character, and general conduct and attitude.

Enrollment Nears Record

Enrollment in the first term of Lenoir Rhyne's current summer session could set a new school record, it was predicted last month by Dr. E. L. Setzler, the registrar and academic dean.

The record was established last summer when 742 students were registered for the first six-week term.

This year's initial registration in early June totaled 727 with additional students expected to register for special two-week courses later in the term.

Two courses in teaching methods were scheduled to begin on June 22: one in driver training and the other in social studies for elementary grades. Later on July 6, classes were slated to begin in a methods course for teaching arithmetic in the elementary grades.

Seventeen students were expected to enroll for the special courses which could boost the registration to a new record of 744.

The first term opened on June 8 and continued through July 15. The second term of the three-month session began on July 16 and will close with the annual summer commencement on Aug. 21.

LOYALTY FUND TOPS $15,000

Despite their continuing support of the college's 1963 capital funds campaign, Lenoir Rhyne alumni managed to keep alive their own annual alumni fund by contributing $15,206.65 to the Loyalty Fund during the 1963-64 year.

The 1964 fund, which ended June 30, set no new records. In general it fell below the level of the record year of 1962, but it did earn the distinction of second-best year in the history of the Loyalty Fund.

In terms of total dollars given, the $15,000 response was a 25 percent drop below the 1962 record of $20,000 but still exceeded the level of $12,000 in 1961.

The same was true with respect to number of alumni contributing to the fund. The total number of donors, 869, represented an 18 percent decrease from the 1962 record of 1,069, but it almost doubled the 1961 response of 443 donors.

The alumni did set a new college record, although it is not a Loyalty Fund record. The 869 Loyalty Fund donors, coupled with the 901 other alumni who made contributions to the Fund for Progress during the college's fiscal year, indicated that a record 1,770 alumni contributed to all programs of the college during the year. The previous record of 1,720 was set during the Fund for Progress campaign of 1963.

The percentage of total alumni giving to the Loyalty Fund last year fell to its lowest level since 1960. The official index was 9.7 percent, as compared to 10.8 percent in 1961 and 16.5 percent in 1962. The drop is partly attributed to the rapidly expanding mailing list of the Alumni Association: in 1961, the number of alumni solicited was 4,000; in 1962, it was 6,400; last year, the number was 8,890.

The average gift of $17.49 was also the lowest in four years. In 1961 it was $27.37, and in 1962 it was $19.12.

The 1964 Loyalty Fund was headed by J. W. McGee, Jr., of Concord. He was assisted by a five-member directing committee and 82 class agents and 320 class workers.

The 1964 Loyalty Fund Honor Roll of Donors includes the following contributors:
